

Shared Use: Policy, Planning and Implementation Resources

Shared use, also called joint use or community use, refers to two or more entities sharing indoor or outdoor spaces for recreational activity. Shared use is most often implemented with schools, community centers, parks and other community facilities such as pools, athletic fields, libraries and senior centers, but can also be implemented at faith based facilities and properties, civic and neighborhood associations and even businesses. The purpose is to provide community access to recreational opportunities where none is found, where standalone or traditional facilities are unavailable, and to serve community populations that have little or no access to other options.

Shared use benefits:

Communities

- Provide local, cost effective access to physical activity
- Develop connections, increase community involvement
- Create equitable access to physical activity opportunities

Facilities

- Develop connections and relationships with the community
- Effective use of facility space
- Provide needed resources to local community
- Cultivate service providers within facility membership, staff

Service Providers

- Access to local community facility to offer programs, services
- Develop relationships with local clientele
- Increase your exposure to local community, agencies, organizations
